Rancho San Carlos Settlement Dissolves

Opponents of the Santa Lucia Preserve fight among themselves. (Submitted by Rancho San Carlos.)

Even after an admonishment from the bench from Superior Court Judge Harkjoon Paik that the law is about "compromise, compromise, compromise", a tentative settlement was reached on Friday, July 28, 1996 in the lawsuit brought about by Carmel activist Noel Mapstead. The suit asks the Court to overturn the County Registrar's count of the signatures on Mapstead's failed petition drive.

In court, Mapstead stated, "The petition drive failed, we did not collect enough signatures, but we have a chance to gain a number of concessions in the public interest. The public should know what we could have." Mapstead is referring to terms that were worked out in the tentative settlement agreement between Mapstead, the County of Monterey and Rancho San Carlos.

Mapstead said the following were some of the public benefits which would come from the settlement:

* 8000 acres of permanent nature preserve set aside in the first phase of development including the scenic redwoods along both sides of lower Robinson Canyon Road.
* A trail system, open to the public, which would give hikers from Garland Park access to the Penyon Peak, Vasquez Knob and Garzas Canyon areas of the Santa Lucia Preserve.
* A public hiking trail established from Rancho San Carlos Road along the south side of the Carmel River on Rancho San Carlos property.
* A public access trail developed from Rancho San Carlos into Los Padres National Forest. An easement from the intervening neighboring property owner would be required in order to extend the trail to the Los Padres National Forest.
* An 800 acre area cultural easement for ceremonial use by Native Americans in the Penyon Peak area off Robinson Canyon.
* Retention of the strict restrictions of "resource conservation" zoning in the areas zoned residential, a concession Mapstead called "very substantial, even unheard of."

Rancho San Carlos said it made these proposals to encourage additional public benefits from the first phase of the Santa Lucia Preserve. But, Holly Keifer, co-sponsor of the petition, effectively stopped the tentative settlement discussions by a last minute plea, from her new attorney Alexander Henson, to intervene in Mapstead's lawsuit. Her request was granted. Henson had been representing Noel Mapstead until the day the Court approved a request from Mapstead to dismiss Henson as his counsel. There was an apparent major rift in the opposition's ranks over the potential settlement that caused Henson's dismissal.

Although no specific details of the settlement were disclosed by the County or Rancho San Carlos, Attorney Brian Finegan commented that the settlement would have averted court hearings and a potential for a special election, with associated costs to the County and its taxpayers of over $200,000. "The Ranch was willing to enter into negotiations that would have resulted in significant public benefits. We saw that effort as a lot more productive than continued litigation where the public is the real loser." Finegan did disclose terms of the financial portion of the settlement however, and said that it included reimbursements to the petitioners for their reasonable costs and expenses associated with the referendum and lawsuit, as is common in out of court settlements. Rancho San Carlos and the County insisted that any settlement, including reimbursements, be approved by the court to ensure that all the terms were in the public interest.

The lawsuit alleges that County Registrar of Voters, Tony Anchundo did not rule correctly when he invalidated over 300 signatures in a petition drive that, if successful, would have forced a referendum on the Board of Supervisors' unanimous decision approving Rancho San Carlos. The lawsuit requests a remedy that would validate enough signatures to put the measure on the ballot. The County Registrar's disqualification was done according to rules governing referenda under the election code, as well as published guidelines from the Secretary of State, according to County filings in the suit.

In court on Monday, July 29, 1996, Judge Paik told all the participants that they should be ready to go to court on August 8, 1996, although Rancho San Carlos opponents argued that they needed additional time to prepare for the hearings. In other action, Paik allowed the Rancho San Carlos partnership to also intervene in the suit as a "party in interest".

acting strange. Lipman was advised that deputies know who Hannagan is and to contact them if she has any problems with Hannagan.

7-30-96 Third watch. Deputies Burke, Hernandez, Mason, Olson.

* Case involves the reporting party, Michelle Adrian, of Southbank Rd., Carmel Valley, reporting receiving annoying phone calls from the suspect, Nicole Wendler, of Seaside. Adrian does not seek criminal prosecution but wishes Wendler to be contacted and the calls to stop. Continues.
* David Shake of Sloat Rd., Pebble Beach, reported that he and his son had a verbal argument. The son had left Shake's residence and was now at home. Shake requested that deputy respond with him to the residence to gather 3 guns for safekeeping. Deputy told him he would do so. However, deputy informed him that he was going to wait for another unit to respond. Shake did not like this idea and cancelled the detail.

YOUR WORLD AND MINE
Araby Colton

Gorby's Back ... Bigger than Ever

Maybe you, as I, have been wondering where Mikhail Gorbachev has got to. Are he and his Raisa freezing it out in some Siberian village, or just house arresting in some obscure Russian town?

Not at all. Gorbachev, as founding President of the Green Cross International, is passionately spearheading nothing less than a drive to save the planet.

When I, in my fecklessness, said to the charming young woman who answered the telephone at Gorbachev's office in San Francisco, "First he cracks open the Soviet Union, now he takes on the environment ... so, all he has to do now is head off the population explosion, and wipe out world poverty, and he'll have saved the world." She laughed, "Yes, that's how he seems to us, a savior."

But Mikhail Gorbachev has for a long time been environmentally aware. At the United Nations in 1988 he called for a halt to humanity's "aggressions against nature". As president of one of the most environmentally irresponsible nations on earth he confronted one horror story after another ... skies black with smoke, rivers loaded with toxic wastes, floods from ill-conceived dams, children playing with poisonous refuse. Then came the explosion of the nuclear power plant in Chernobyl, as he says, "The final argument. All of us then understood the kind of monster we had created."

Green Cross International is a private organization established at the Earth Summit in Rio in 1992, with chapters in the United States, Russia, the Netherlands, Japan and Switzerland. Gorbachev's prestige has attracted as board members such worthies as former Secretary-General of the U.N. Javier Perea de Cuellar, former Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu, scientist Carl Sagan, former President of Switzerland Rene Felber.

It's initial program is to clean up military toxins, to assist in the creation of global ecological law, and to foster a universal value system protecting the environment.

Of military toxic wastes Gorbachev speaks with authority. Russia and the United States, he says, are the prime culprits. And they have both kept the facts from their citizens.

The United States has more than 30,000 tons of chemical weapons, including deadly nerve, mustard, and other poisonous gases, stockpiled at eight major sites. (One drop of one of these substances on your skin will kill you instantly!) In Russia, 40,000 tons of these now obsolete and dangerous weapons of mass destruction are stockpiled at seven major sites.

Nor are these places safe ... they leak. The Rocky Mountain Arsenal, near Denver, storehouse to 125 types of toxic waste, has been called the "most polluted square mile on earth." Traces of military toxic wastes, spilled in the Ural Mountains, says Gorbachev, have been found thousands of miles away, in the Arctic Ocean.

Mikhail is nothing if not articulate. He closed his speech at the Fourth International Global Forum Conference in Kyoto, Japan, with these words: "The 20th century has been, in effect, a century of warning. At present we are running a race against time. What will happen next ... a critical escalation of global threats and the collapse of our civilization, or a critical growth of hope, of the willingness and ability of the international human community to develop new, truly humane ground rules of living together, capable of saving civilization?

It is up to all of us who live today on this planet to answer this question. Man is not a god who owns nature. Man is part of nature. As we plunder nature we plunder ourselves."

And I would add, as we cherish nature and all her beautiful creatures we cherish our best selves.

WHAT'S NEXT? Mel Vercoe

Yes, I suppose it's unpatriotic to lose faith in our country. Well, it isn't our country that I'm losing faith in. It's the people. They've changed. They care about crime being out of control, for example, only when it is they, personally, or a close family member, who gets murdered or robbed.

If called, as "a peer", as required by law, to serve on a jury to decide the guilt and the fate of an animal whose guilt was clear as a bell within the first few hours of a trial, our typical juror will agonize for days and weeks and months to find some justification to find said human animal either not guilty, or, if there is no way to get out of that, at least make sure, in a murder case, that the murderer won't be executed.

Do we have to go back to the "vigilante system" in order to get as much justice for victims as we guarantee for killers? Just exactly what happened to the liberty and justice for all idea? Originally, execution was expected to serve as a deterrent. Today, we have roughly 29,000 murders per year in the U.S. Our less than three dozen executions per year can hardly be considered any kind of a deterrent.

Sure, our criminal justice system is an international joke, especially in a modern, supposedly civilized country with the highest capita number of attorneys in the world, and I expect that might be part of the problem. A criminal justice system that worked properly, as originally intended, couldn't even begin to support such an inordinate number of attorneys.

50 Years of Giving - Monterey Peninsula Golf Foundation

The Monterey Peninsula Golf Foundation, governing body of the annual AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am golf championship, celebrated 50 years of giving on July 29th at a cocktail reception at the Beach and Tennis Club in Pebble Beach. The tournament has been played on the Monterey Peninsula and host course, Pebble Beach Golf Links, since 1947 when it was relocated from southern California.

Over the years the tournament has donated to hundreds of nonprofit organizations affecting the lives of thousands of individuals on the Central Coast and beyond. The 1996 AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am alone raised $1.7 million for distribution to charity, matching the record set last year.

Grants were presented to over 60 charitable organizations. One of the organizations receiving funds will be the National Pro-Am Youth Fund which has helped scores of youth oriented organizations over the past 50 years including schools, sports leagues, youth centers and libraries. To date over $18 million has been donated to charity.

Wildlife Center Seeks Volunteers

The SPCA's Monterey County Wildlife Center is desperately in need of volunteers.

The Wildlife Center rescues, rehabilitates and releases thousands of animals each year. Wildlife helpers meet opossums, owls, deer, hawks, song birds, pelicans and some other rare animals, such as albatross and vultures. Many of these animals have been injured or abandoned and need a helping hand so they can return to the wild.

"Right now we are getting a lot of animals that need care, and our staff is struggling to keep up with the number of animals," says Wildlife Center Director Libby Osnes-Erie. "This is a situation where volunteers can really step in and make a difference. This type of work can be unglamorous, but it can also be very rewarding. Our volunteers sometimes hand feed the animals that a few months later they personally release back into the wild. It is a great feeling."

The SPCA's Wildlife Center is the only rehabilitation center for wildlife in Monterey County, and it operates under state and federal permits. If you have a few hours a day or week to give, call 422-4721 for information about volunteering.

New Carmel Valley Bus Stops

Monterey-Salinas Transit (MST) line 24-Carmel Valley and Monterey is now boarding passengers, inbound and outbound, within the Carmel Mid-Valley Shopping Center grounds in front of the fitness center. This service began Saturday, July 27, 1996.

This new stop allows riders to board and deboard at the same stop. The stop times remain the same, as shown in the MST Rider's Guide.

A new bus stop has also been added between Laureles Grade and Garland Ranch Park at the Equestrian Center on Carmel Valley Road. Riders are served going in both directions.

For further information call MST Customer Service at 899-2555.

County Fair Helps Missing Children

An innovative idea will be presented this year by the Monterey County Fair in collaboration with the national headquarters of the Vanished Children's Alliance in San Jose.

The six day fair begins August 20 and continues through the 25th.

During this year's fair the entrance and exit gates will feature an area with photographs and descriptions of missing children along with a toll free number, in an attempt to locate runaway or abducted children.

The concept was developed by the Monterey County Fair staff in hope of assisting the Vanished Children's Alliance.

Each year approximately 450,700 children run away from home. Every 40 seconds a child becomes missing or abducted in the United States.

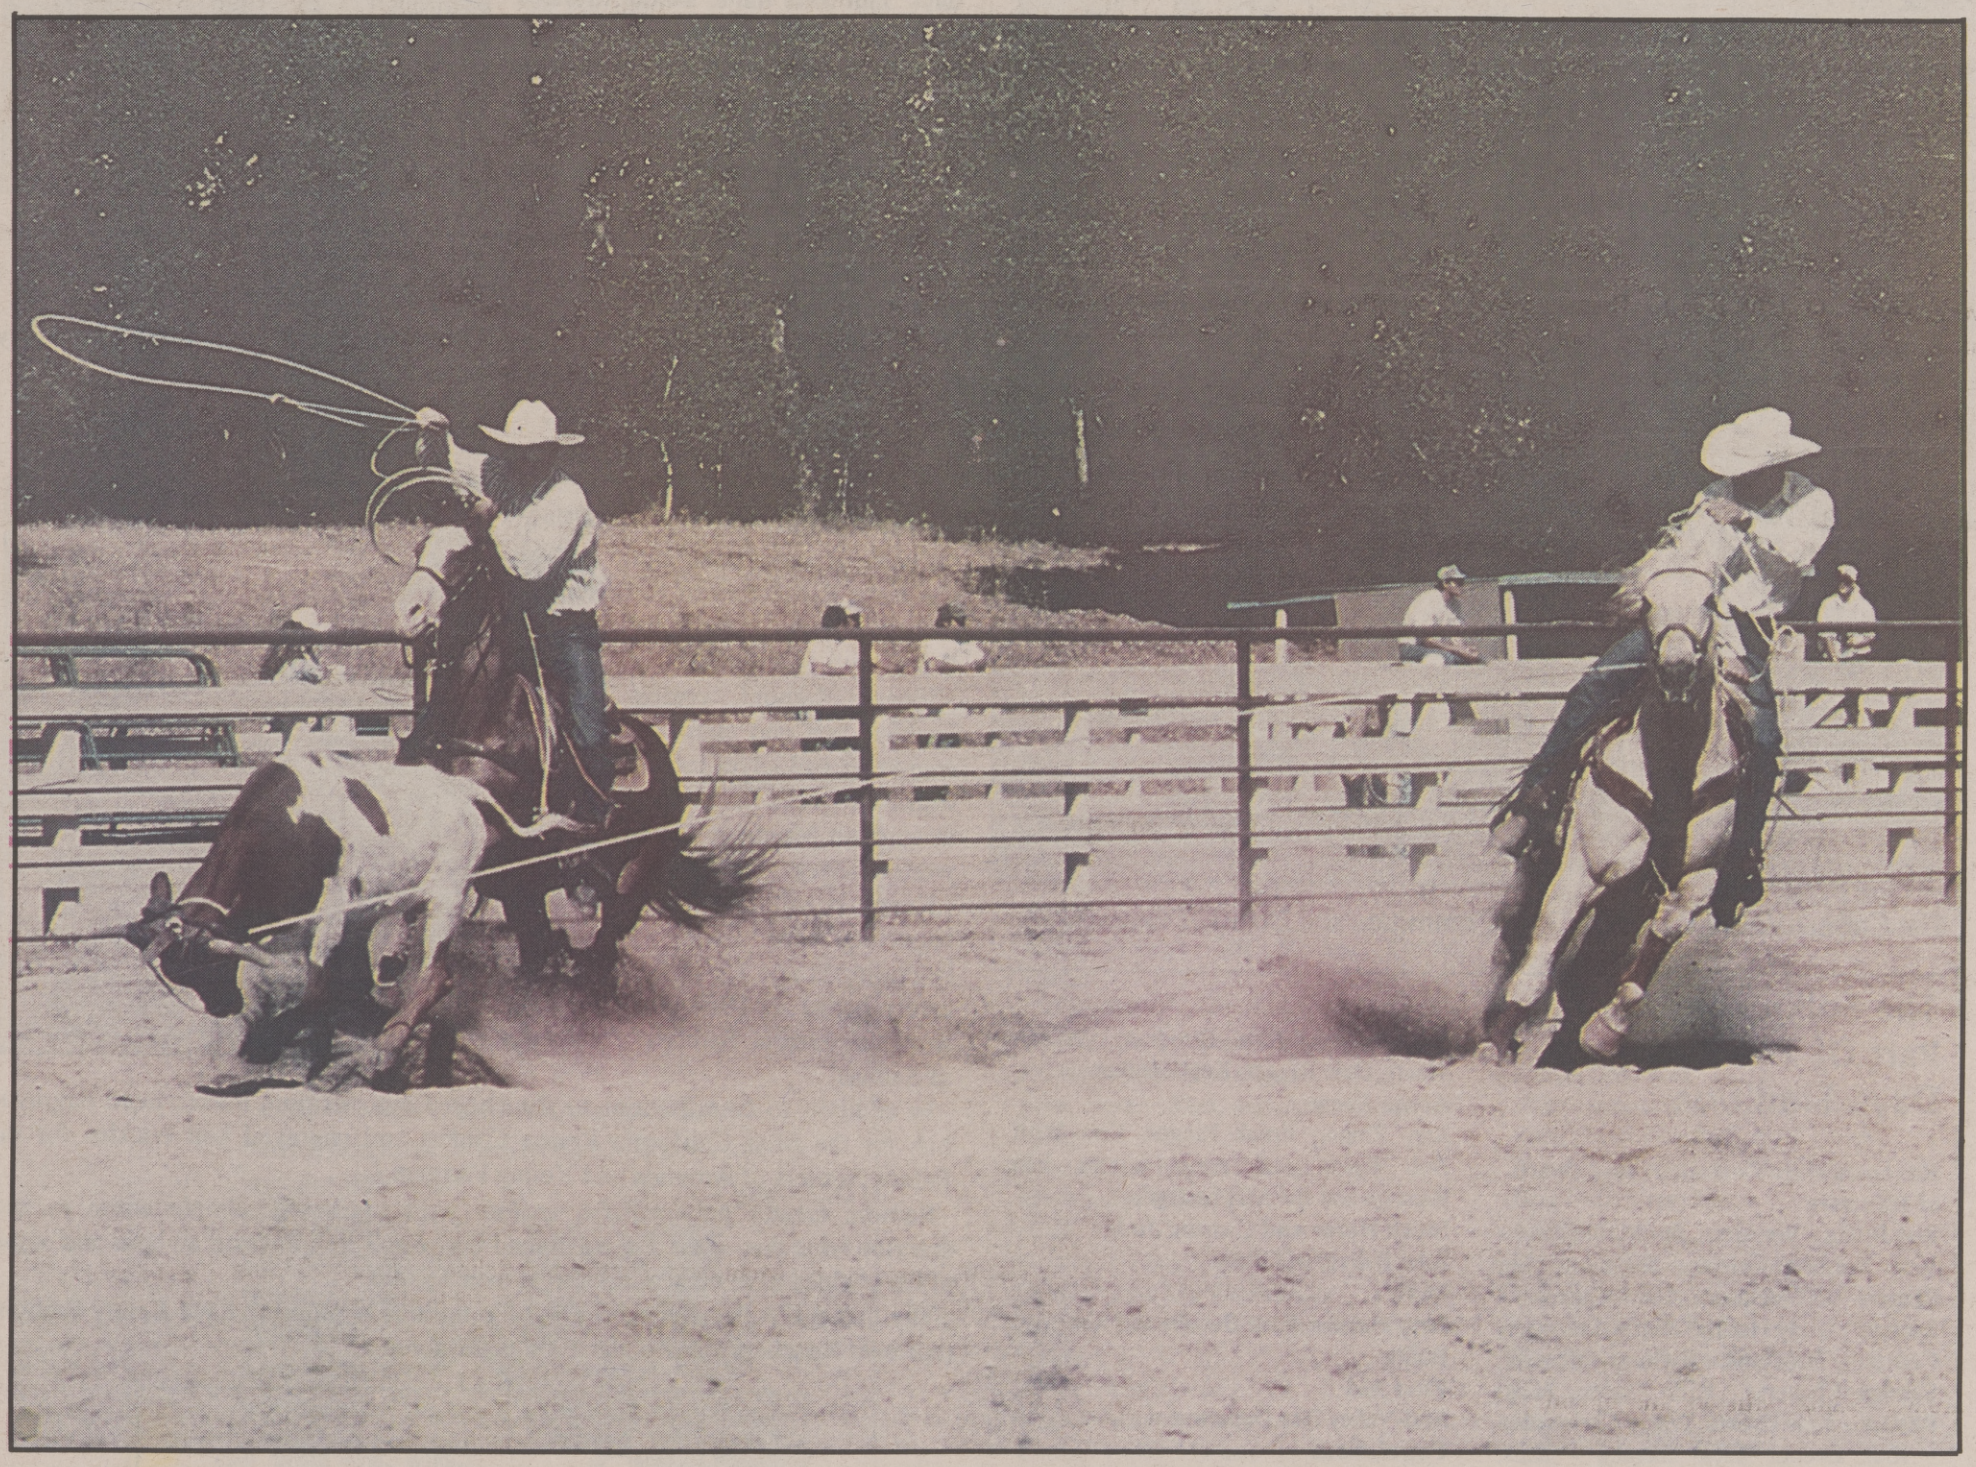
CARMEL VALLEY RANCHERS' DAYS

August 14 - 18, 1996

Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club
East end of Garzas Road, Carmel Valley

August 8, 1996



Carmel Valley Ranchers' Days was started 14 years ago by a group of dedicated volunteers whose main desire was to demonstrate the traditions, skills, and talents of the California ranchers and ranch hands. Cowboys and cowgirls from surrounding counties as well as contestants from as far away as Nevada and Arizona will participate in the events.

Letter From the President

Once again Ranchers Days is here, our 14th to be exact. This year is expected to be the best year yet. Carmel Valley Ranchers Days 1996 is being dedicated to Sam Jurey, a long time friend and Carmel Valley Rancher who has participated at Carmel Valley Ranchers Days many times, and Ken Ramoni of Carmel Valley who for many years made the buckles, spurs and bits awarded at Ranchers Days. Both men exemplify the Western Way of which we are so proud.

I would personally like to thank all the local merchants, ranchers and the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Educational Alliance Inc. for their sponsorship. Also, last but far from least, I would like to thank the VERY BEST COMMITTEE any organization could ever hope for, without their dedication and HARD work Carmel Valley Ranchers Days would not be.

As usual, all money from Carmel Valley Ranchers Days will be put back into the community through local organizations, fire departments, community centers, 4H clubs, and schools. This year we are pleased to announce that an on-going scholarship fund will be established at Carmel High School for a deserving student focusing on Animal Science. (Great idea Ann Ringer, our newly elected Treasurer.)

Carmel Valley Ranchers Days would also like to extend our condolences to the families of Lupe Alonzo and Kurt Schebert. Lupe did the GREAT BBQ at Ranchers Days for many years and Kurt was a participant, you will both be missed!

In conclusion, I would like to extend my personal invitation to all, come out and join in the festivities and support Carmel Valley Ranchers Days - see ya there!

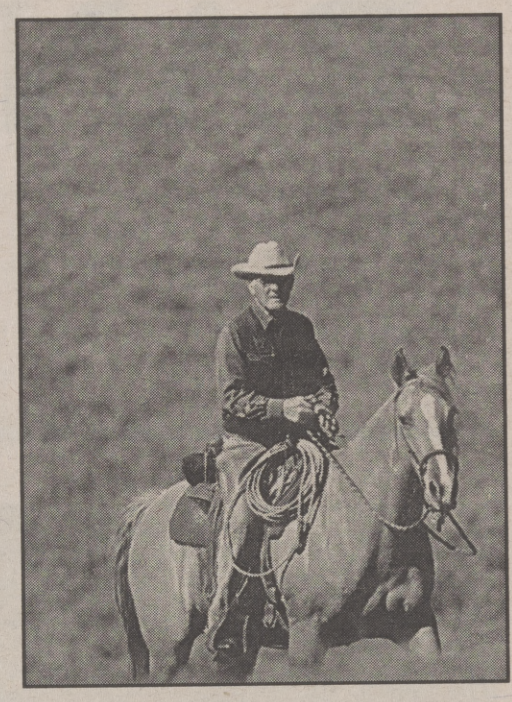
The 14th Annual Carmel Valley Ranchers Days Honors Sam Jurey and Kenny Ramoni



Sam Jurey

When Sam Jurey came to Carmel Valley in 1952 to manage what is now Carmel Ranch Company he had no idea he would be working for the same ranch forty-four years later. Born in Battle Mountain, Nevada, Sam worked for many ranches in his home state before moving to Salinas and finally settling in Carmel Valley.

Although ranching has kept Sam busy most of his life he is no stranger to the Rodeo Circuit. In his younger days Sam rode bulls, saddle broncos and bare back horses in Rodeos throughout the west. Sam has also shown many stockhorses and helps out each year at Ranchers Days through judging the junior stockhorse class.

Today Sam spends his spare time braiding rawhide and making jewelry. Sam still calls on longtime friend and co-honoree Kenny Ramoni when he needs a silversmith tip.

The Carmel Valley Ranchers Days Committee is proud to have Sam Jurey represent Ranchers Days as the 1996 co-honoree.

Kenny Ramoni

Kenny Ramoni was born on the Quinsabe Ranch east of Hollister and currently lives on the Carmel Ranch Company ranch east of Carmel Village. Ramoni creates custom buckles, bits and spurs with custom engraving and silver inlays. His hand engraved works have become famous throughout Monterey County and the western states.

Kenny is self taught and has been engraving for over 47 years, beginning at age 13. His professional career began in 1948 when went to work for Garcia Saddlery, formerly of Salinas.

In addition to contributions to Ranchers Days, Ramoni makes hand engraved bits for the Miss California Rodeo Contest and engraved belt buckles for the Future Farmers of America and Young Farmers.

Ramoni creates personalized, custom work; generally people come in and describe what they want. He will spend between 3 to 5 days on an item and some of his buckles have been appraised at over $6,000.

The Carmel Valley Ranchers Days Committee is proud to have Kenny Ramoni represent Ranchers Days as the 1996 co-honoree.

CARMEL VALLEY RANCHERS' DAYS

EVENTS

For those uninitiated in ranching skills, here is a brief explanation of this years Ranchers Days events.

Team Roping: Team roping involves two people and one steer. The objective is for one person to rope the horns and for the other to rope the hind feet. After this is accomplished and the horses face one another the clock stops and the fastest time wins.

Keyhole Race: This event is for juniors up to age 17. The horse and rider run through a chalk outlined "keyhole", going in, turning around and exiting without touching the chalk outline and the fastest time wins.

Dummy Roping: This event is for kids up to age 12. The kids, on foot, try and rope a "dummy" steer, (actually a hay bale with horns). The child who can rope the dummy steer from the farthest distance wins.

Junior Goat Undercoating: In this event children up to age 12 try and remove a ribbon from a tethered goats tail. The fastest time wins.

Stickhorse Race: Children up to age 6 ride their stickhorse up to, around and back from a 5 gallon bucket - the fastest time wins. (You remember, a stickhorse is essentially a broomstick with a plastic horse head.)

Ladies Goat Milking: This is the only uni-gender event where ladies run to the goat, milk the goat and run back to the finish line without spilling the milk. The fastest time wins.

Sam Wilcoxen in the stickhorse race

Open Calf Branding: Two people on horseback enter a pen with four calves. The goal is to brand two calves in the fastest time. (The branding iron is not hot, rather it is coated in whitewash.)

Open Team Penning: A three member team on horseback enter a pen with 30 cows and try and cut three specified cows from the herd into a specified area. The fastest time wins.

Stockhorse: The "dry" portion involves riders and their horses performing a predetermined pattern including things like a figure eight, sliding stops and spins. The second portion involves the rider working a cow up and down along a fence and then circling it.

Old Style Calf Branding: This event is similar to open calf branding but more emphasis is placed on the "fancy loop" which is a more elaborate roping technique.

Ranchers Choice Team Penning: A junior and an adult team on horseback enter a pen with several cows and move two into a designated area. The fastest time wins.

COMPUTER TALK

Val Healey

Part 22 - An introduction to computers at a naively simple level.

Monitors emit strong electromagnetic fields and it is not advisable to stay within 3 feet of them for long periods. There are low radiation monitors which conform to a standard called MPRI-II and these were made mandatory in Sweden several years ago by the government there. Happily, they are now becoming widespread in the U.S. and don't cost significantly more than non-MPRI-II ones.

Computers may be "green", i.e. they may have dpms (display power management system) which allows one to set the monitor to go into a "sleep" mode if it is not used for a predetermined period of time, like 5 minutes. Touching the keyboard or mouse wakes it up. These green computers were strongly pushed by the Clinton/Gore administration because of their concern that, when computer use became very widespread, people would arrive home from work, switch on the computer to check their e-mail and then would go off to other things leaving the computer switched on. On a nationwide scale, this could generate a massive peak demand, which would create serious problems for the power industry and unnecessarily waste much energy.

A green computer earns the EPA's "Energy Star" rating if the power consumption drops to 30 watts or less in the sleep mode. The more efficient modern 15" Energy Star monitors consume about 100 watts in normal use and this can drop to 5 watts in this mode. The monitor and cpu together typically consume around 200-250 watts, so a drop to 30 is a respectable saving and, under certain conditions, a green system could save around $100 on energy bills over a year.

Unfortunately, apart from conforming to the 30 watt standard, what constitutes a green computer is poorly understood. Some unscrupulous computer assemblers install a motherboard that supports green functions and call the computer green. For most computers, the cpu chip must have the power management capability built in and some chip manufacturers such as Intel have had this feature in virtually all chips made in the past few years. In addition to this chip the monitor and video card (sometimes called the graphics card) should also support dpms. The settings are usually made in the rom bios and the cpu sends the signal to the monitor via the video card to trigger the sleep mode. More advanced computers may have several levels of sleep.

Notebook computers are like slim brief cases and are very portable. They have rechargeable batteries and can be operated for several hours while away from any electrical connection. They open in a way similar to a briefcase and the display is located on the inside of the lid.

These displays are usually flat screen liquid crystal display (lcd) and are inferior to the standard desktop monitors which are very bulky and often 18" deep. The highest quality notebooks have what is called an "active matrix" screen and there are several lower quality types. It is best to closely inspect the display, especially in a range of light levels, of a notebook computer before buying.

Monitors are one of the few computer components whose prices have not significantly fallen in the past few years. For about the same expenditure, one can buy today an Energy Star, MPRI-II unit for about the same price as a regular one without these features about three years ago. Most other components have dropped very significantly price wise.

In selecting a desktop monitor the most important factors are: VGA or SVGA, I or NI, MPRI-II, 0.28 dp minimum, size (length of diagonal of the picture), green (Energy Star), blurring around edges of screen, flicker (scan rates), color fringes on black type, squares and circles not accurately drawn and small type appearing fuzzy. Matching the monitor and video card is very important.

In the next part we will look at graphics, in particular how pictures are formed and stored.

"Well, I refuse to live happily ever after on a budget, George!"

Supplemental Property Taxes

They have been with us since July of 1983, but you and your neighbors still may not know what they are, what they do, and how they affect you and your property.

To help you better understand this confusing subject, the California Land Title Association has answered some of the questions most commonly asked about supplemental real property taxes.

Q. When did this tax come into effect:

The Supplemental Real Property Tax Law was signed by the Governor in July of 1983 and is part of an ambitious drive to aid California's schools. This property tax revision is expected to produce over $300 million per year in revenue for schools.

Q. How will Supplemental Property Taxes affect me?

If you don't plan on buying new property or undertaking new construction, this new tax will not affect you at all. But, if you do wish to do either of the two, you will be required to pay a supplemental property tax which will become a lien against your property as of the date of ownership change or the date of completion of new construction.

Q. When and how will I be billed?

"When" is not easy to predict. You could be billed in as few as three weeks, or it could take over six months. "When" will depend on the individual county and the workload of the County Assessor, the County/Controller/Auditor and the County Tax Collector. The assessor will appraise your property and advise you of the new supplemental assessment amount. At that time you will have the opportunity to discuss your valuation, apply for a Homeowner's Exemption and be informed of your right to file an Assessment Appeal. The County will then calculate the amount of the supplemental tax and the tax collector will mail you a supplemental tax bill. The supplemental tax bill will identify, among other things, the following information: the amount of the supplemental tax and the date on which the taxes will become delinquent.

Q. Can I pay my Supplemental Tax Bill in installments?

All supplemental taxes on the secured roll are payable in two equal installments. The taxes are due on the date the bill is mailed and are delinquent on specified dates depending on the month the bill is mailed as follows:

(1) If the bill is mailed within the months of July through October, the first installment shall become delinquent on December 10 of the same year. The second installment shall become delinquent on April 10 of the next year.

(2) If the bill is mailed within the months of November through June, the first installment shall become delinquent on the last day of the month following the month in which the bill is mailed. The second installment shall become delinquent on the last day of the fourth calendar month following the date the first installment is delinquent.

Q. How will the amount of my bill be determined?

There is a formula used to determine your tax bill. The total supplemental assessment will be prorated based on the number of months remaining until the end of the tax year, June 30.

Q. Will my taxes be prorated in escrow?

No, unlike your ordinary annual taxes, the supplemental tax is a one time tax which dates from the date you take ownership of your property or complete the construction until the end of the tax year on June 30. The obligation for this tax is entirely that of the property owner.
